GOOD ADVICE TO FARMERS

Not many farmers who have been raising tobacco for the market in years past have ever held their crops for summer delivery. Therefore, a few words to those still holding their tobacco in barns at home will not come amiss.

In the first place the tobacco should be hung very close, in fact pressed moderately together, as this will prevent much loss in weight which happens when often coming in and going out of case. In this close-hung condition it should be left until it gets the advantage of as much hot weather as possible, thereby insuring the tobacco a thorough drying. Consult Mr. Ware before taking your tobacco down. If it should come into the warehouse in too high case so that there is likely to be damaged tobacco after pricing, it will have to be at the owner's risk and expense. This extra expense means that the tobacco will have to be rehung in the warehouse here and the warehouse company can not advance money on it until it is in condition to insure keeping. One of the best tests is that after two or three dry, still days the tobacco is found early in the day, say before 8 o'clock, to be in good case, there will be little risk in bulking it to keep.

Follow these directions and let every man who knows how to handle in summer order render what assistance and advice he can to his neighbor. With our drying plant next season we will not have this trouble.

I will be glad to answer any questions growers may wish to ask me in reference to this matter. Respectfully,
F. A. WARE, (Grader.)

TRAMPS

ARRESTED

Charged With Stealing Money and Valuable Papers.

Jack Reardon and Lon Thornbury, two tramp umbrella fixers, were arrested here yesterday morning by Marshal Grace upon a charge of stealing a purse and pocketbook from the residence of Mrs. Matt Wycoff. A little son of Mrs. Wycoff saw one of the men coming from the residence yesterday morning about 8 o'clock, and he reported the matter to his mother. Upon investigation the purse and pocketbook were missing. In the purse were three silver dollars and a ten dollar bill; in the pocketbook were three stock certificates on the Farmers Bank of Mackville, and four or five hundred dollars in notes. When the men were arrested some silver money was found upon them, but the $10 bill, notes and stock certificates were not found. After a careful search the purse was found near where the men had passed along the road, but a diligent search for the valuable papers proved fruitless.

Both men deny the charge, but it is generally believed that they are guilty. In fact the evidence against them is almost direct.

Jailer Catlett overheard a conversation between the "palms" yesterday afternoon. The younger of the two was very much irritated because the older had told where the purse and pocketbook could be found, and he asked him why he told it. The older replied: "I have told nothing; mum's the word." Further efforts will be made to get a confession from the men, and it is hoped they will tell where the stolen notes and stock certificates can be found.

True As Gospel.

How few ever stop to think of the result likely to follow a little act, and how many are reckless in the use of their tongue, and especially when discussing a scandal. An exchange says: The story is told of a woman who freely used her tongue to the scandal of others and made confession to the priest of what she had done. He gave her a ripe thistle top, and told her to go out in various directions and scatter the seeds one by one. Wondering at the parable she obeyed, and then returned and told her confessor. To her amazement he bade her go back, gather the scattered thistle seeds, and when she insisted that it would be impossible, he replied that it would be even more difficult to gather and destroy all evil reports which she had circulated about others. If the recording angel is keeping any record on scandal circulators, what a job he has in every town and also in some country neighborhoods.

McCHORD AT LAWRENBERG

Addreses Large Crowd of Tobacco Growers in Anderson.

The following is from last week's issue of the Anderson News:

On Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock Mr. Richard Crossfield, of Fox Creek, arose in the Court House and introduced, in a few appropriate words, to the large audience gathered there, Mr. William C. McChord, who was to address the growers upon that important subject, "The Formation of the Society of Equity and the Building of a Tobacco Warehouse for this County." Mr. McChord began his able talk by saying that the people of this county owed him a great debt of gratitude as it was due to his efforts that so many good citizens had been added to this already splendid county. He said that one-third of the tobacco raised in the United States was raised here in Kentucky; and that it brought into the pockets of the poor laborers the enormous sum of thirty-million dollars each year. He spoke of the organization of the Society of Equity at Lexington by five of six men some four years ago, and paid a high tribute to Mr. Ben Franklin, of this county, who had worked so hard and indefatigably for the success of this movement. That it required a peculiar soil for a proper cultivation of Burley tobacco and no where else on the face of the earth was this soil to be found except here in Kentucky. That the American Tobacco Company was composed of multi-millionaires with magnificent offices in New York where their many employees were receiving not less than three dollars per day while the wives and children of the tobacco growers themselves were laboring for the small sum of thirty, forty and fifty cents per day. He said the great armies and navies of Europe were supported on the tobacco grown in this country by the system of taxation carried on in those countries. He pled with the growers to stand together and told them that where there was only one buyer there should be only one seller.

He spoke of his visit to New York in the interest of the Burley growers and his call upon James B. Duke, the president of the American Tobacco Company, and his reception there. He met there such men as Rockefeller, Hill, Rogers and others who had no sympathy for the poor grower and would do all in their power to keep him down and his family impoverished. That he told them he would return to this State and organize the growers and by that means ruin their great and powerful organization. He told of the good to be derived from a perfect organization and the better prices to be realized. That it was no new idea; the people of the great wheat growing belt of the West had organized and received greater profits for their commodities. He then told them of the value of a tobacco warehouse and the money to be made therein. Of the great success which had attended the one in his home county of Washington and urged the farmers and growers of this county to come together and build one at once. It was one of the most powerful and interesting arguments ever heard here and should the tobacco men follow up this splendid advice the future price of their crops will be assured. In this connection it is well to append the following for the benefit of those who heard what the able speaker had to say about James B. Duke, president of the American Tobacco Company. At the conclusion of the remarks of Mr. McChord, the President of the A. S. of E. in this county, Mr. Ben Franklin, appointed committees to solicit funds for the purpose of erecting a warehouse in this city.

Ice Coupon Books.

Save money by buying ice coupon books. Books of 500 pounds will be sold at a discount of 5 per cent, and a book of 1,000 pounds at a discount of 10 per cent. Ice is 50 cents a hundred. Cash must be paid.

First National Bank.

In spite of the hard times said to be prevailing the First National Bank reports a most successful six months business. It paid a dividend of 5 per cent., paid all expenses, set aside over 1,500 for taxes, besides adding to its surplus. This, we think, is a pretty good showing for even a larger bank in a larger town.

Death of Miss Durrett.

Miss Bessie Durrett, of Bloomfield, died yesterday morning at 3 o'clock of typhoid fever, after an illness of seven weeks. Miss Durrett was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Durrett. She was eighteen years of age, and was a beautiful and charming young woman, possessing one of those genial natures which made her dear to a large circle of friends. Miss Durrett was a niece of Mrs. J. R. Claybrooke, near town and of Mr. J. R. Durrett, of this place, at whose home she had often visited. Deceased was a member of the Presbyterian church, and was a beautiful Christian character. Funeral services will be conducted to-day.

Program of Lebanon Chautauqua.

We have received the program of the Lebanon Chautauqua, July 18 to 27 inclusive. The program indicates that the Chautauqua of this year will be better in many respects than last year. Larger crowds are expected, and the accommodations will be first-class.

Mr. Bryan will lecture at 1:30 p. m., July 20. Senator Tillman on July 23. A large number of America's greatest platform orators are on the program. Besides this feature there are many others—band concerts, quartets, vocalion contests, base ball, etc. Make it up your mind to attend. The time will be happily and profitably spent.

Peoples Bank.

The Semi-Annual statement of the Peoples Deposit Bank, found in this issue of The Sun, shows that institution to be in a prosperous condition. Deposits of $215,160.68 and loans of $251,789.96 give the bank ample resources to care for its patrons. The Peoples Bank is now one of the strongest in Kentucky, and it is very gratifying to the friends of the institution to note the strides of advancement it is making.

Central Bank.

We call attention to the statement of the Central Bank of Williamsburg, printed in this issue. Considering that the institution is not yet a year old, the statement is a strong one. The stock holders and directors are to be congratulated. Mr. Smith, the cashier, is an accommodating gentleman, and is monthly making new friends for the institution.

Struck By Train.

Elizabeth Kennedy, Ky., June 28.—Cherrel Kennedy, the 1. C. pumper at Cecil, this county, was struck by a train yesterday evening and his left arm mangled and his skull fractured. His arm has since been amputated, and he is now in a serious condition. It is supposed that he was asleep on the side of the track.

ANOTHER SHORTAGE

Of Cars Predicted...Fill Your Coal House During the Summer.

Hopkinsville, Ky., June 28.—In a letter to the Terry Coal and Coke Company, of this city, C. C. McChord, chairman of the Railroad Commission for the State of Kentucky, predicts an even greater scarcity of coal cars during the coming winter, and advises every one to fill their coal houses during the summer in order to be prepared against the coal shortage, which he thinks will result.

Chairman McChord says: "I unhesitatingly advise all consumers of coal to lay in a supply during the summer months and thereby avoid the inconvenience which must result on account of a shortage of cars next winter, which in my opinion, will be much more acute than was the shortage of last winter, unless consumers lay in their coal as suggested. You are at liberty to publish this in the interests of the producers and consumers of coal."

Last year the coal dealers and miners claimed that the shortage of coal would not have happened had the consumers bought their supply and had it delivered during the summer, when cars were standing idle on sidings at nearly every station, instead of waiting until the cold weather came, when the demand was so great that the supply of cars proved insufficient to deliver the amount needed.

Editor J. S. Wilson Dead.

Bardston, Ky., June 30.—J. S. Wilson, editor of the Kentucky Standard, correspondent of the Courier-Journal and a well-known writer, died at his home here this afternoon after a few weeks' illness, aged forty-eight years. He leaves a wife, who was Miss Mabel Clarke, of Cincinnati, O., and one son, John F. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson established the Kentucky Standard here in 1900, and has made it one of the best weekly papers in the State. Before this he was connected with the Nelson Record. He had a reputation as a writer of special articles. His illness will occur here Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Death of Dr. Eaton.

Grand Junction, Tenn., June 29.—The Rev. Thomas Threshwell Eaton, D. D., LL. D., of Louisville, pastor of the Walnut-street Baptist church, of that city, and widely known as a minister, lecturer, author and educator, died here at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon.

Dr. Eaton's death followed a hemorrhage of the brain, which struck him down on the depot platform at 9:20 o'clock this morning, while he was waiting for a train to carry him to Blue Mountain, Miss., where he had an engagement to deliver a series of lectures before the B. Y. P. U. encampment.

Dr. Eaton arrived here at 8:40 o'clock this morning, and after walking about town for a few minutes went to the depot. Several persons standing about saw him sink to the floor and assisted him to arise, but, realizing that he was very ill, they summoned Dr. J. C. Johnston, a leading physician here, who came immediately and found that the distinguished divine had sustained a mortal attack.

Dr. Eaton's last words were: "I am a very sick man." He sank into unconsciousness, lingering until 1:45 o'clock, when he passed away.

Dr. Eaton was probably the best-known Baptist minister in Kentucky and throughout the entire South he was well known. His long pastorate at the Walnut-street church in this city, his connection with the Western Recorder, a Baptist publication, as editor for twenty years, and his educational and missionary work in the Southern Baptist church has made the name of Dr. Eaton known wherever there is a Southern Baptist church.

Before starting on his trip to Blue Mountain, Miss., Dr. Eaton had been attending the general assembly of the Baptist Church at Mayfield and had had a busy week there. His sudden breakdown is attributed to his constant hard work. He was always on the go and did the work of four men, a member of his family said last night.

"All of his mother's family died of old age, and he thought he could go on working without ever taking a rest," said one of his family last night. "He was on the go continually, and overwork killed him."

Dr. Eaton was sixty-two years of age, or would have been had he lived until next November. He was born in Murfreesboro, Tenn., November 16, 1845, and lived there until he was fifteen years of age. His father, the Rev. Joseph Hixwood Eaton, LL. D., was the founder of Union University, at Murfreesboro, and it was there that Dr. Eaton obtained his early education.

The Right Name.

Mr. August Sherpe, the popular over-seer of the poor, at Fort Madison, Ia., says: "Dr. King's New Life Pills are rightly named; they act more agreeably, do more good and make one feel better than any other laxative." Guaranteed to cure biliousness and constipation. 25c at Hayden & Robertson's drug store.

BIG SUIT FILED.

Col. Chinn Sues a Rich Patent Medicine Concern For $25,000.

Harrodsburg Herald: Col. Jack Chinn filed suit Monday against the Foster Milburn Company, of Elmira, N. Y., for $25,000, and the same day L. E. Munro, an agent of the company from New York, who had come here to place his goods on sale with some druggist, was called on in his room at the Commercial Hotel by Sheriff Forsythe, who served the papers on him. This company is an extensive manufacturer of patent medicines, among them Dan's Kidney Pills. Some weeks ago the company distributed hundreds of their almanacs in Harrodsburg and Mercer county that contained a picture of Colonel Chinn and under it a strong endorsement of the kidney pills, bearing what purported to be the signature of his name. Among other things the Colonne was made to say: "I join in endorsing Dan's Kidney Pills which were recommended to me a few months ago when I was feeling miserable. Had never pains in the back, was restless and languid. A few boxes of pills effectually relieved the ailment and I am glad to acknowledge the benefit I have derived." Colonel Chinn says he never took a kidney pill in his life and in his statement says that the distribution of these pamphlets throughout Kentucky and in every state in the union and in other countries, without his consent, wherein it was stated that he had suffered with pains and divers other illnesses and had been cured by the use of Dan's pills, was false in every particular and the publication has caused him great mental suffering and mortification and has brought him into ridicule among those who know him and has discredited him and disgraced him with the people at large, and that he has been damaged $25,000. The company has millions. Attorneys Merryweather Smith and E. H. Gaitner represent the plaintiff.

Former Marion County Boy.

Marion Falcon: It is not generally known here that one member of the International Peace Conference now in session at The Hague was born and reared in Marion county. This delegate is Judge U. M. Rose, of Little Rock, Ark., who, although a Democrat, was appointed by President Roosevelt as one of the representatives of the United States to this Peace Conference of the entire world.

Judge Rose was born at Radfordville about 70 years ago. One day, when a lad, he was chopping stove wood at the wood pile in front of his home, when the late R. H. Rowntree, who was then a student at the college, came by and stopped for a chat with the boy. He was so favorably impressed with the bright young intellect that he asked him if he would not like to study law. An affirmative answer came quickly and Mr. Rowntree told him to get the consent of his parents and come on and begin his studies as soon as he desired.

Within a few days the boy had begun his studies that have won for him a national reputation as a scholar and jurist and now brings him to the notice of the whole world.

At the age of 20 years he was married to Miss Maggie Gibbs, a cousin of the late Paul I. McElroy and the father of Mr. J. M. Knott and other well known people of this county, and they went West and settled at Batesville, Ark., and later at Little Rock, where he engaged most successful in the practice of law.

Declaring His Independence.

The American farmer is about to declare his independence of the speculative Wall Street, and the movement has not been initiated a day too soon.

The farmer has worked and worried, and his profit has been small. The bad crop worries were all for him. He stood the loss alone. The speculator in life's necessities can do as well on a bad crop as on a good one.

We are glad to be able to tell our readers that the farmers have made up their minds to vote, and end the system, and they have gone to work intelligently.

Hitherto the farmer alone has had nothing whatever to say about the price to be paid for what he actually produced. It is guaranteed to do what we claim and by its use a home cure at very little cost is easily brought about.

Children are often troubled with skin diseases, such as eczema, scabies, and other eruptions. The use of this ointment will cure them. It is a sure cure for all skin diseases, and it is a sure cure for all skin diseases, and it is a sure cure for all skin diseases.

But the farmer was forbidden to say anything in fixing the price of his goods.

This is to end, the work has been already begun in the farmers' organizations. This newspaper congratulates the farmers, and greets as public benefactors the moving spirits in the great farmers' organization.

The farmers of the country are the backbone of the country. They develop the nation's real wealth, which is the wealth of the soil. They are entitled to a fair share of that wealth and of the national prosperity. By combination, by high honor, by fair prices for their cotton, their wheat and their other crops, and by refusing to sell the non-perishable products except for a fair price, they have already added tens of millions to the annual return from the farms. They will add tens and hundreds of millions more annually as their unions increase in power.

The isolated human being, whether he be farmer or mechanic, is at the mercy of every form of greed and cunning.

The farmer has too long pined, and rowed, and sweated, and fretted to build up bank accounts for others, and pay interest on mortgages. We are glad that he has decided, by union, to keep for himself and his family which means for the people of America; that to which they are entitled.—Weekly News, Denver, Col.

How to Cure Chills.

"To enjoy freedom from chills," writes John Kemp, East Otisville, "I apply Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Have also used it for salt rheum with excellent result. Guaranteed to cure fever, colds, influenza, piles, hemorrhoids, frost bites and skin diseases, etc. at Hayden & Robertson's drug store."

How the World Says Good-By.

In different countries, just as the manner of greeting is varied, so is the habit of saying goodbye. The Turk will solemnly kiss his hands upon his breast and make a profound obeisance when he bids farewell. The Japanese will take his slippers off as you depart and say with a smile: "You are going to leave my deplorable house in your honorable journeyings. I regard you here."

In the Philippines the parting benediction is bestowed in rubbing a friend's face with one's hands. The German's "Lebe wohl!" is not particularly sympathetic in its sound, but it is less embarrassing to those it speeds than the Hindu's performance, when you go from him falls in the dust at your feet. The Fijians nod their two red feathers. The natives of New Guinea bend low and say, "Hib, hib."

The "Auf wiedersehen" of the German is the most feeling expression of farewell. The Cuban would consider his good-by by anything but a cordial one unless he was given a good cigar. The South Sea Islanders rattle each other's spears and teeth. In the islands of the Straits of the Sound the natives at your going will stomp down and clap your foot. The Russian form of parting salutation is brief, consisting of the single word "Brachai," said to sound like a sneeze. The Othobian will twist the end of his departing guest's robe, and then solemnly shake his own hand three times.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

The Long-Lived Orchid Flower. Even when the flowers are old and have developed they may remain uncut upon the plant for two or three weeks without apparent deterioration. This is due to the fact that the plant has the most flowers that have to be cut immediately upon, or even in advance of, reaching full maturity.—Country Life in America.

A Mild Laxative For Baby's Bowels. The infant or the child should not be given salts, purgative waters or harsh pills or tablets when the bowels are constipated, and neither should any medicine be used that contains a narcotic. It is well for mothers to remember that there is no better, gentler or more effective remedy for children's stomach and bowel troubles than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Its purity and mildness make it especially adapted to young people's use. It works gently but surely, and containing, as it does, many tonic ingredients, it not only cleans out the congested bowels, but tones up the system and makes the child feel better in every way.

Among the thousands who are using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in Mrs. Spaulding, of Maryland, Ky., and she writes that her baby regularly and that she would not be without it. She has used it herself for a long time and ought to know.

Mothers who find this an invaluable remedy for old and young in constipation, dyspepsia, liver troubles, indigestion, worms, and the many other ills that afflict the stomach and bowels, will find it well worth the price and by its use a home cure at very little cost is easily brought about.

Louisville's New Mayor.

Louisville Herald: Robert Worth Bingham is a North Carolinian by birth, his natal city being Asheville. He is in the prime of manhood, being thirty-six years of age. His early education was received in a military school at Asheville, of which his father is commandant. He later graduated with high honors from the University of North Carolina, and took a post-graduate course in the University of Virginia.

Returning to his home he became an instructor in his father's school, an institution that was founded by his great grandfather in 1793. For four years he occupied the chair of Ancient Language.

He married Miss Eleanor Miller, a daughter of Samuel A. Miller, of Louisville, in May, 1888, and removing to this city matriculated in the Law Department of the University of Louisville, taking both courses in one year, and graduating high in the class.

Mr. Bingham entered the law office of J. T. O'Leary in 1887, and continued to practice his chosen profession in that connection until 1900, when he formed a partnership with Mr. W. W. Davies, his present associate, under the firm name of Bingham & Davies. The vacancy in the office of County Attorney, caused Mr. Samuel B. Kirby becoming Judge of the Chancery Court, Second Division, was filled by the appointment of Mr. Bingham. This was in January, 1904. In the fall he was re-elected to fill out the remainder of the term, and in 1905, was his own successor in the office.

During the recent lid agitation Mr. Bingham was chosen by the Governor to carry out his Sunday closing policy after the regular authorities had proven their inability to do so. His last act in his official capacity as County Attorney was the exposing of the alleged irregularities in the contracts for the Courthouse.

Bryan Will Be Nominated.

Washington, June 16.—All this talk of nominating a Southerner for the presidency is nonsense. Bryan will be nominated. He dominates the Democratic party as completely as Roosevelt dominates the Republican party.

This is what Representative Griggs, of Georgia, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee, thinks. He has recently returned from a trip through several of the big States, and believes Bryan's nomination inevitable.

"Of course," says Mr. Griggs, "this is providing Mr. Bryan wants the nomination. I do not know whether he wants the nomination. I do not believe he would want to run if he thought it would be for the best interests of the party to have another candidate. If Bryan is not nominated, the question of a Southerner may then be considered. We have plenty of good men—Williams, of Mississippi; Culberson, of Texas, and Hoke Smith, of Georgia, among them."

"Are the chances for Democratic success near?"

"Now, I have been making unverified predictions of Democratic success for so many years that I decline to keep it up. I'll say, however, that I believe the President can be again elected."

"The issue next year?"

"Third-termism if Roosevelt is nominated; the tariff, the trusts and anti-trust legislation of Government, if he is not."

Teach a Child Good Manners.

Give the child a seat that shall be strictly his own. Teach him to take his seat quietly. Use his napkin properly, to wait patiently, to answer promptly, to say "Thank you." If asked to leave the table for a forgotten article or for any purpose, to do so at once; never to interrupt and never to contradict, never to make remarks about the food, such as "I saw that turkey killed, and how he did bleed!" Teach the child to keep his plate in order, to always say "Excuse me, please," when leaving the table before the rest of the party, to fold his napkin and put back his chair or push it close to the table before leaving and after leaving the table not to return.

How to Remove Callosities on Feet. To remove a callosity spot on the sole of the foot first soak it well in hot water to soften. Then with a sharp knife cut off as much of the thick skin as may be removed without hurting, but great care should be taken not to touch the soft skin. After the cutting spread the place with a paste made of half a dram of salicylic acid, ten grains of castor oil and half an ounce of lanolin. Bind on with a thin piece of cotton muslin. Keep this softening grease on the callosity place day and night, for it will eventually cause the hard spots to soften entirely.

Bounced Through Window. Bounced in the air by the springs of a bed on which he was playing, two-year-old Florence Engle, daughter of Charles Engle, of 1214 North Alder street, Philadelphia, was tossed through a second story window of her home and landed on the sidewalk, twenty feet below. She sustained a fractured skull and other injuries, which may result in her death.

Robert Worth Bingham will make Louisville good, therefore he will be a good Mayor.

The Springfield Sun offers a reward of 30 cents for the apprehension of John D. Rockefeller, who is now a fugitive from the United States Court.

John Rockefeller is running from the courts again. His hiding place is known but he is barricaded, and "Justice" is afraid to approach.

HAND-SHAKING.

One of the most disgusting things we know of is this fool way of shaking hands the Smart Set up in New York introduced a few years ago. We never dreamed that the "new idea" would be introduced in Kentucky, where the people generally like the old-time grip of grandpa and grandma, but it is surprising to know that a great number of Kentucky women have "ketchuped on," and are now greeting friends in the New York way. Briefly, as follows: The hand is raised on a level with the head; the arm is made rigid; the fingers are closed tightly and twisted downward. While this is being done both parties to the transaction are expected to "smile." Next comes the "hand-shake," and its "perfectly inspiring," because it is so gracefully "did." The young man, it is gallant, will tell the young lady that she shakes more artistically than the last gal he "shuck" with. This will make her feel like she is some pumpkin, and will encourage her to practice the "shake" at odd times.

The New York idea will be in vogue in the South until the coons "ketchup on" and then we will all go back to the old-time way.

Editor Gore, of the Springfield Sun, who is a candidate for the State Senate, very enthusiastically approves of the American Medical Association's stand against kissing babies. From his standpoint one can see where he is right. It is a tough job to have to kiss a dirty faced baby for a vote. The job isn't worth it.—Kentucky State Journal.

Ain't no dirty-faced babies in this district.

Walter P. Lincoln has been appointed Judge of Jefferson county. The name sounds good, and if he is kin to Abe he will doubtless "make war" in Louisville.

The Course of The Governor.

(EVENING POST.)

The Evening Post a few days ago made the statement that the Governor was seeking to do the best thing possible for good government in the city of Louisville. We made that statement when nothing had been decided. We repeat now that the Governor has followed that purpose with patience, forbearance and with intelligence.

There were temptations in various directions. There were arguments of the most persuasive kind that might have induced him to take one or the other path. There was much that could have been said in behalf of other men suggested by their friends for the position of Mayor. The Evening Post does not undertake to decide the disputed questions as to the relative merits or to make a comparison of the claims of the various candidates; we wish simply to say that the Governor has vindicated, through the appointment of Mr. Bingham, his claim to the confidence of the people of Louisville. He has acted with a singleness of purpose that should bring to the Governor the confidence of the State. He has put the Democratic party of this city in a different position from that it has occupied for twelve years. He has made it the exponent of modern ideas which are, in fact, ideas as old as the moral law. He gives to the city of Louisville a new opportunity for self-government. He has earned the gratitude of the city and the respect of the people of the State.

The laws are to be enforced in this city. The New Mayor will have behind him an enlightened public opinion. There is to be no period of persecution and punishment. The face of the New Democracy is turned to the future. It is to be judged by the things that are to come. The Governor has met the requirements of his position. He has served his party well in that he has forced it to put its claim for confidence upon the services it is able to render to good government. He has given to the city the fullest opportunity to shape its own affairs in accordance with its own wishes or its own necessities. He has compromised with no foe, he has surrendered his judgment to no friend, he has acted in accordance with his own conclusions. The Evening Post believes that he is to-day, in consequence of the course he has followed, strong with all men regardless of party relations.

The Slanderer.

Say brother, never by word, sign or insinuation malign the character of a girl or woman. No matter how pure and sweet a woman may be, the meanest scoundrel on earth can damage her character, tarnish her fair name and forever cloud her life by a suggestion or insinuation. The meanest man on earth is he who would resort to such a damnable thing.—Ladonia News.

That is all very true, but your remarks should not have been addressed to your brother alone. Your sister should have been included. It is a fact that has always been past my understanding, that the most dangerous enemy to a woman's character is another woman's tongue. Men are bad enough, but they are not so bad as women in this respect. It is the exception when a man speaks slightly of a woman's name, but it is the exception when a woman will not do it. As a rule, when a man says anything that casts a shadow on the chastity of a woman, he knows what he is talking about. A woman speaks of what she suspects, or hints at what is possible, and makes her language as hurtful in suggestiveness as a direct charge. It seems that one woman would have sympathy for another woman, even if she knew her sister were weak. But not so. Men forgive women on any sin, but women never forgive the slightest indiscretion in one another; furthermore, they never permit it to be forgotten.

I heard a woman just the other day speak of the girlhood of one who is now the mother of a family of sons and daughters and who has lived a model life for years, but the incident was spoken of in such a way that left little doubt in the mind of the hearer that the good woman had once fallen very low. The truth is that there was nothing wrong in the act spoken of, but that it had given ground for suspicion, which suspicion originated in another woman's heart and had been spoken by her lips, and had lived to throw a shadow over an innocent life. I know women whose hearts are so tender (?) that they can not bear to see a woman dangling from a hook, and who shudder at the thought of a wounded bird, but who will deliberately stab a sister woman with words that cut and kill—words that bring more agony to the suffering hearts than if they were blades of steel thrust into the vitals. They know no pity when their victims writhe under the torture, but they seem to think that they have done a righteous deed.

Ah! the pity that this is true! Oh! the shame that they will tolerate women who make it their pleasure to tell their suspicions, to recite, with nod and wink, the "things they have heard" concerning another. They are more dangerous than vipers, more despicable than those thieves who steal our purses, and are worse at heart than the weakest of their sex.

Yes, when it comes to the meanest and lowest, and most despicable character of slander of a woman's good name—the kind that surmises, and suspects, and damns with spoken doubt and half-concealed truth, women can carry off the palm. I hate such characters as I hate the devil, whose children they are. I had rather live in a den of snakes than to be associated with them, and I think the poor nameless girls who fill the dens of infamy are spotless characters compared to the woman who will blight the life and kill the soul of her innocent sister with words of venom and of shame.—Bonham News.

Newspapers Combine.

Frankfort, Ky., June 27.—W. Vernon Richardson, of Danville, one of the owners of the Danville News, who was here to-day, announced a consolidation between the three Boyle county papers, the Advocate, the News and the Herald. The new paper is to be called the Advocate, that being the oldest paper in the county. Col. H. E. Woolfolk, who has long been its editor, retires under the consolidation and receives, it is said, $10,000 for his paper. The Herald is at present edited and published by W. Owen McIntyre, who will be a partner with Messrs. Richardson and W. Reed Embury in the publication of the Advocate.

The merchants of Danville, in order to promote the consolidation, have agreed to advertise in no other paper for a period of five years, thus keeping out competition. Messrs. Richardson and Embury have published the Danville News for seven years, and are among the best-known young newspaper men in the State. Mr. Richardson is the present secretary of the Kentucky Press Association.

The Sun and Daily Kentucky State Journal, both one year

What Mr. Johnson Really Said.

A neighborhood quarrel in a Scotch-Irish settlement in Virginia culminated in a lawsuit in the justice court. Mr. Davidson was on the witness stand. The attorney on the side that introduced him asked:

"What did Mr. Johnson say then?" The opposing counsel objected on the ground that this was merely hearsay evidence. The judge sustained the objection, and Davidson's side lost the case. It was appealed to the county court, the same point came up, and the ruling of the judge was upheld.

Six months had gone. Another appeal was taken to the circuit court. A year went by before the final decision was handed down, and the judge's ruling was again sustained. Another appeal was taken and this time to the court of appeals.

The docket was crowded, and time dragged on through two long years before the highest judicial body in the state delivered the opinion that the squire was in error and that Mr. Davidson might be permitted to tell what Mr. Johnson said.

The case was remanded. Again it came up before the squire. Four years elapsed, and still Mr. Davidson carried the case in his possession. The whole country was wild to know what Mr. Johnson had said, and nearly the whole population was present at the trial.

The presiding lawyer, who had appeared so many times put Mr. Davidson on the stand. He asked him many questions. Finally, with a furtive glance toward the opposing counsel and with a gleam of triumph in his eye, he asked:

"What Mr. Davidson, tell the jury what Mr. Johnson said." All eyes were turned on Mr. Davidson, all ears were pricked up. Mr. Davidson shifted his legs, stroked his beard and sat painstakingly and deliberately at the bar box. Then he looked at the jury and said:

"He didn't say a darned thing." New York Sun.

Bunco. "Don't ye believe it," said Mr. Dooley, "Nobody is too smart to be bunked. Th' on'y kind iv people that can be bunked are smart people. Ye can be too honest to be bunked, but never too smart. It's the people that are thyrin' to get something 'fr nawthin' that end in gettin' nawthin' fr ivrything."—P. P. Dunne, in "Disasters by Mr. Dooley."

LITSEY-LEACHMAN

One of the prettiest home weddings ever witnessed in this county was that of Mr. David Randall Litsey to Miss Elizabeth Gilbert Leachman last Saturday evening, June 29 at 7:30. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. Lawson, of the Presbyterian church, at the home of the bride, near town.

Mr. Litsey is a son of County Judge and Mrs. B. L. Litsey, and is one of the county's best known and popular young men. He is connected with the Robertson-Claybroke Co., and is recognized as a progressive young business man. His bride is a charming young woman and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Henry Leachman. She has a large circle of friends who have learned to admire her because of her amiable disposition.

The ceremony was to have been performed upon the beautiful lawn at the country home of the bride, but a severe storm came up in the afternoon and continued throughout the evening, hence the wedding occurred in the parlor of the Leachman home. The house was beautifully and appropriately decorated, and those present say the wedding was one of the prettiest they have ever witnessed. An elegant supper was served immediately after the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Litsey left for Danville at 8:15, where a train was boarded for Cincinnati. In that city they will join the Knight Templars in a tour of the Northwest. They will return to Springfield about July 22.

The Sun extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Litsey.

KILL ME ANY TIME.

So Says Nonchalant Alleged Murderer to Officers.

COLD BLOODED CONFESSION.

Charles H. Rogers Tells How For $16 He Killed the Olney Brothers and Alice Ingerick of Middletown, N. Y. Conscience Untroubled.

"Take me out and kill me any time you please," said Charles H. Rogers, alleged murderer of the Olney brothers and Alice Ingerick of Middletown, N. Y., when he was locked up in the Goshen jail. Rogers was captured in Los Angeles after a chase lasting a year. On his way across the country he made to his captors a confession which chilled their blood.

"I had been planning this act for a month," said Rogers to his captors. "I thought the Olney brothers had a good deal of money in bills about their clothing and concealed in the house. I wanted to go west and get away from here. At first I thought night was the best time to do it. Then I calculated it was best to do it in daylight, for the farm is a lonely enough place.

"On the day of the murders I left home. I told my wife and children they would never see me again. I took with me a piece of iron pipe wrapped in a copy of the Middletown Times-Press. I had a revolver. I went cross lots to avoid passing by the home of my parents. From a hill I saw Fred Olney drive into the yard. He had been to the Ogden farm to deliver his milk. I thought of course he had been paid in cash for that and that it would be so much more money for me. "I walked down to the place and told Olney I was a detective and needed his help and that of his brother in capturing a man who had hidden in the berry woods. He called Willis Olney, and we three went in his milk wagon to the edge of the woods. Fred Olney and I went to the woods together, leaving Willis with the team. After going in some distance I shot Fred Olney in the back. He fell dead.

"Mrs. Ingerick's daughter came and smashing through the bushes to see what was the matter. When Willis came into sight I shot him too. I searched their pockets. I took a pocket book from Fred Olney. There was very little money in it. It contained only a check for the milk he had delivered at Ogden's that day and some papers. I took Fred's watch and Willis'.

"I took the money, hid the papers that were in the wallet in a chink in the stone wall, near which the boys had been left. I left the horse stand there. Then I walked to Olney's house and met Mrs. Ingerick. I told her that one of the Olneys had been killed by the horse and was hurt. She went to the barn to get something for him. I followed. As she went into the cow shed I struck her on the head with the piece of gas pipe. She fell down, and I beat her over the head many times with the pipe. I thought she was dead when I left her.

"First I covered her body with straw, and then I went up to the house. There I met Alice Ingerick, nine years old, Mrs. Ingerick's daughter. I told her to go down in the cellar and close the door. As she started down the cellar I hit her on the head with the gas pipe. She fell downstairs. I followed her and pounded her over the head until I felt sure she was dead.

"Thinking they were now all dead," Rogers continued, "I went up and searched the house for the money. I didn't find any. All I had for these still and I shot I had taken was $16 and two watches. Maybe there was more money hidden there, but I was scared off from looking for more.

"My cousin, a farmer from Wurtsboro, and his son drove up. They were out buying onions. They showed Olney. I was in the attic at that time. I went out and the cousin, thinking no body was at home, went on. I looked out and saw them in the road going away. I didn't want to stop longer. I went over the hills to the hogback.

"The hogback is a part of the Erie railroad between Middletown and Howells. There Rogers provided a guest for Oliveville. He stayed there that night. Next morning he threw away the revolver in a stream and took a train for Port Jervis. He took one of the silver watches to a watch in Port

FARM GARDEN

THE CELERY CROP.

Unique Method of Marking Straight Rows by Diagrams.

The old saying "More crows grow in crooked than in straight rows," may find favor with some growers, but celery growers get best results from straight rows. Straight rows look more workmanlike, and in cultivating, blanching and harvesting straight celery rows are a necessity. To enable one man to mark out straight rows in the quickest possible way we stretch two strong cotton lines, which cost about 25 cents apiece, where the first two rows are to be, say three feet apart, writes a grower in American Agriculturist.

WINTER QUEEN CELERY.
(Thirty-nine inches long.)

From a garden drill we remove all the seedling attachments and run the drill wheels over line 1 from a to a. Before running back on line 2 (b to b) we put the stake of line 1 from a to c. When we arrive at b, stake of line 1 is moved from a to c, which puts the line in position for marking the third row. Before running the wheel on the third row from c to c stake of line 2 (b to b) is moved to d. When arriving at c, stake of line 1 is moved to d, which puts line 2 in position for the fourth row, etc.

For long rows we use one measuring stick at each end of the rows and one in the middle. The middle stick is pushed in the ground against the line to prevent the wind from displacing the line. When we plant day after day, we do not take up the lines at each end, but simply loosen one end to prevent their breaking from shrinkage. The time to wind up the lines would cost far more than they are worth. We can better afford to buy new lines, say every two years.

Value of Sediments.

Irrigating sediments may be beneficial or harmful to crops, according to their composition and physical character and their disposition in or upon the soil. Whether beneficial or harmful in composition, if they accumulate upon the surface of the soil in the form of blankets more or less impervious to water and air, their influence, by limiting the supply of these essential substances to plant roots, is notably harmful. In certain localities where these irrigating sediments are very plastic in character and excessive in amount the damage, particularly to alfalfa and other crops which cannot receive constant and thorough cultivation, is of an increasingly serious character.

Cultivation, where practicable, as deep and thorough as possible, is the best available means of handling these accumulations. Beneficial sediments are thus incorporated with the soil and their fertilizing properties made available to plant roots, while sediments of barren character are dispersed to the depth of cultivating through the soil. When, however, sediments of undesirable character predominate cultivation can only modify and not remedy resulting conditions.

In such cases it is desirable to lessen the sediments in irrigation waters by means of settling basins and similar devices.—S. Fortler.

Testing Bordeaux Mixture.

There are three simple tests for the Bordeaux mixture which may be used: First, hold a clean, bright knife blade in the Bordeaux for at least one minute. If it becomes copper plated, more of the Bordeaux into a shallow dish and, holding it up to the light, look gently across its surface. If properly made, a thin pellicle will form on the surface of the liquid. If this does not form, more lime should be added. Third, dissolve one ounce of ferrocyanide of potassium in five or six ounces of water, pour some of the Bordeaux into a white dish and add to it a few drops of the ferrocyanide solution. If sufficient lime has been used, no change will be noticed. If a brownish red discoloration takes place, more lime should be added.—A. B. Cordley.

PEAVINE HAY.

A Money Crop That Is Productive on Poor Land.

I start out by saying I can make more money on peavine hay than I can on cotton—that is, counting expenses, writes a Georgia farmer in Southern Cultivator.

In the summer of 1905 I turned eight acres of wheat stubble that only made twenty-eight bushels of wheat with 200 pounds of guano per acre. Then I drilled in one bushel of speckled peas and 100 pounds of guano per acre with a Hoosier grain drill, then run over the ground with a drag and made it perfectly smooth. That year I cut, and sold in bulk $100.50 worth of hay off of the eight acres. Then I followed it in wheat again, made ninety bushels, put in peas before and made $175 worth on the same ground.

Kill All Weeds and Grass. I am very careful to kill all the grass and weeds before sowing my peas, so that the grass and peas will not come up together and be ready to cut at the same time.

I set at least three-fourths of the pods get ripe before cutting. Do not cut more at one time than you can care for. I cut after the dew is off, rake before night, leave in windrows till the next evening and then haul to the barn or stack. I haul my hay to market from the field, for which I get $20 per ton.

Sowing Thin Land.

I would advise our farmers to plant less corn and cotton, prepare it better and make more. Sow your thin land in peas. Land that will not make more than 500 or 600 pounds of seed cotton, with 200 pounds of guano per acre, will make from one to one and a half tons of peavine hay per acre.

One man with a team can turn, drill, cut and house one acre in two days with only a boy to help him load. I commenced sowing about the 1st of May and continued until July 30. Sow four or five acres every time it rains. Do not lose any time out of your crop, and your hay is not all ready at the same time. I cut and sell my hay when it is ready. By doing so I have far better and a nice bank account before I commence to sell cotton.

On Rich Ground.

Sow sorghum or German millet on rich or bottom land. Peas will grow too large a stalk. It will be too hard and woody, and stock won't eat it. Peas in the sand are as clover and timothy in the north and west. When it is too wet to work in your crop, sow peas, and the more peas the better for your land.

Do not fall to sow because peas are high. When they are high is the time to have some to sell.

Alfalfa in South Carolina.

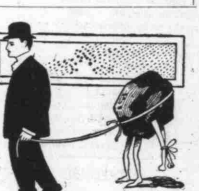

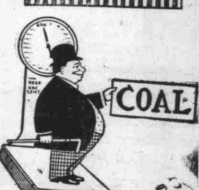

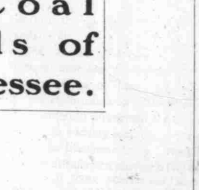

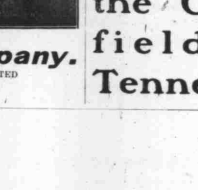

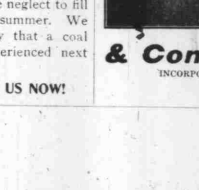

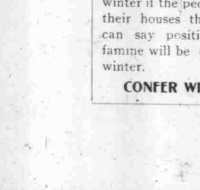

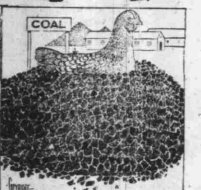

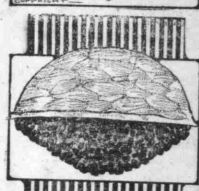

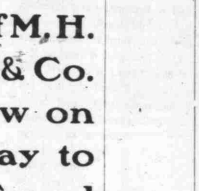

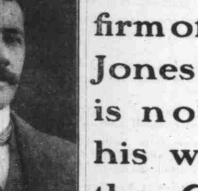

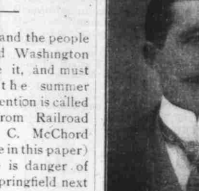

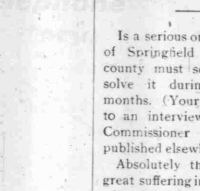

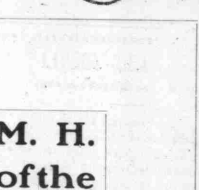

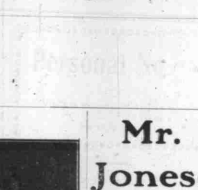

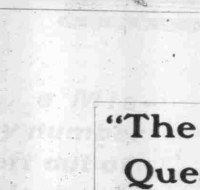

The South Carolina farmer has become accustomed to the methods of preparation for and cultivation of cotton and corn and rice and potatoes, and these methods are practiced in a majority of instances at least more through habit and imitation than by a correct understanding of the principles and practices involved or on account of the reasons for the performance of the details leading from the seed up through the cultivation of the growing crops. The popular methods of corn and cotton culture are in many cases based on tradition, and these methods may embrace more or less truth. To successfully grow alfalfa in South Carolina will require intelligence of a higher order than that usually employed in the production of our staple crops, and will also necessitate a breaking away from some of our old ideas and the understanding of ideas new.—C. L. Newman.

In Western Kansas.

If trees are planted and hedge culture is continued to the western border of Kansas, agriculture will continue to be more successful. In Rice county the winds do not blow now as they did thirty-four years ago. Hedges, timber belts and fruit orchards have brought this change, and with it has come successful farming in a degree that I never expected to see when I first looked the situation over.—G. R. in Kansas Farmer.

How to Treat Lacquered Ware.

No polish should ever be used for lacquered articles. If once applied, the metal polish will spoil the surface of the lacquer. Lacquered goods should be rubbed up with a leather and, if dirty, washed with a little warm water and soap.

"The Coal Question"

Is a serious one, and the people of Springfield and Washington county must solve it, and must solve it during the summer months. (Your attention is called to an interview from Railroad Commissioner C. C. McChord published elsewhere in this paper.)

Absolutely there is danger of great suffering in Springfield next winter if the people neglect to fill their houses this summer. We can say positively that a coal famine will be experienced next winter.

DEVOTED SISTER Clings to Precious Pa- per Although Close to Drowning.

Vanceburg, Ky., June 28.—If, when Mrs. Cora Griffin tells her story and presents her faded and mud-stained petition to the Pardon Board at Frankfort next Tuesday, the board refuses to grant her request for the parole of her brother they will prove that they are men who are hard to move indeed.

The killing of Matt Howland at Quincy by Florence Hensley about five years ago is still fresh in the minds of citizens here, although it probably seems an age to young Hensley, who has since been confined in the Frankfort penitentiary under a sentence of twenty-one years. At the time of the trial Hensley's sister, Mrs. Cora Griffin, was devoted to his cause and stuck to him through thick and thin, being almost prostrated when the jury found him guilty. But she was a plucky woman and never gave up hope. Some time since she moved with her husband to near Caney, Kan., and recently, thinking the time ripe to make an application for the parole for her brother, she journeyed across the continent to plead his cause before the Board of Pardons. She labored diligently and secured over 100 names to her petition, including all our prominent business men, court officials, Judge Harbeson, the Judge who presided over the trial, and ten of the eleven living jurymen who convicted him.

Last Friday morning she started to drive to the home of J. J. Cooper, the eleventh jurymen, to try to secure his signature, and was accompanied by Orville Tannian, of this place, as driver. When they came to Bruce's Ford, on Kinney, and started to cross, Mr. Griffin climbed out of the rig on an island in the middle of the creek, while Orville climbed out on the horse's back and drove on to test the depth of the water. Suddenly the horse plunged forward into deep water and disappeared from view. Orville was thrown over its head and had gone under twice when Mrs. Griffin called to him to hang to the buggy until she could get assistance. He caught hold of the buggy top and stood on top of the wheel, the water than being above his waist. As he could not swim he was still in a dangerous predicament. The water between Mrs. Griffin and the shore was running like a mill race, but she bravely waded it until it was waist deep, when she was swept from her feet. With one hand she grasped the rocky bottom and fought her way to shore, while with the other she clung to the petition for her brother. Her life, which was truly dearer than her life, although almost exhausted when she reached the shore, she ran up the hill almost a half mile, screaming for help until she attracted the attention of several men, who secured a boat and rescued young Tannian from his dangerous position. They also pulled the buggy and dead horse from the stream, stripped off the harness and loaded the harness and buggy on the K. and F. train and shipped it to Garrison. Procuring another rig, Mrs. Griffin proceeded to the home of Mr. Cooper and secured his name to her petition, completing the appeal for the release of her brother, as well as one of the most remarkable experiences that ever fell to the lot of a brave woman.

Gone On Before.

In memory of our dear mother Mrs. A. L. Whitehouse, who departed this life June 11, 1907. Her remains were laid to rest at the Hayville cemetery the following day. She is survived by her aged husband, and following children: Two daughters, Mrs. Henry Young, of Gravel Switch, and Mrs. Will Young, of Springfield, and six sons, Henry and Thomas Whitehouse, of Lebanon, and George Whitehouse, of Lebanon, and James, Samuel and Edward Whitehouse of Livermore, Ky., one sister Mrs. E. S. Mills, of Danville, and one brother Mr. William Sharp, of Junction City, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her death.

Faded and gone is our dear mother, Many are the tears that are shed, Sad is that home and so lonely Since our dear mother is dead.

Peaceful be that silent slumber, Peaceful in the grave so low, Thou no more will join our number, Thou no more our songs will know.

Dearest mother thou hast left us, Here thy loss we deeply feel, But 'tis God who has bereft us, He can all our sorrows heal.

We miss you, darling mother, A voice we loved is still, A place is vacant in that home, That never can be filled.

She is gone but not forgotten, From this world of pain and care, And in heaven we hope to meet, Her in that land so bright and fair.

Written by one who loved her,
